Palm Springs, CA (May 30, 2011) -- Fulfilling one of its important goals, Palm Springs Modernism Week has developed and implemented its Modernism Week Scholarship Program following the success of the 6th Annual Modernism Week in February 2011.

The Scholarship Committee, comprised of Modernism Week board members Sidney Williams and William Kopelk, selected two deserving Palm Springs High School students who are interested in pursuing architecture and design career paths. The Modernism Week Scholarships are for $1,500, renewable for each of the remaining 3 years of the students' college education.

Scholarship checks in the amount of $1,500 were presented at the Palm Springs High School Senior Awards to Katrina Dippner, who will be attending College of the Desert to study interior design, and to David Phung who will be attending Woodbury University to study architecture.

"Modernism Week is delighted to assist these young, creative and dedicated students in their pursuit of a career in design and architecture," said Sidney Williams, chair, Modernism Week Scholarship Committee.
